SO, WE'RE SUPPOSED TO TRAVEL THE INTERNET AND DOWNLOAD 80 MEGABYTES OF VIRTUAL ITEMS COLLECTIVELY FROM OUR CHOSEN COUNTRIES. NO COMPRESSION ALLOWED, OF COURSE! THEN WE HAVE TO WRITE A ONE PAGE REPORT ON EACH ITEM, EXPLAINING HOW EACH ITEM IS SIGNIFICANT TO THAT COUNTRY'S HISTORY. I THINK IT'LL BE FUN!

It's time for letters! Are you ready? I'll wait. Processing...Processing...Finish that cookie already! Okay, this first letter has been a favorite of ours since our self-publishing days and it remains our most treasured cat story to date. Not only because the gentleman who wrote this did so on an Amstrad (my first word processor--it used 3 inch floppies! Not 3.5 inch, not 5.25 inch, just 3...NOTHING was compatible with it)! Memories...Ah, but the real treat here is the cat story in the end! Enjoy...

Konnichinya!

Just a quick note to say how much I enjoy RC! Cats'n'computers make for an interesting mix. The former you can't tell me much about, being a long time cat ownee (no, that's not a spelling error). But computers? Ha! I'm writing this on a clunky old 8mhz Amstrad PC. This is deepest Wiltshire, home of the information super footpath, the museum where I work only just got a fax for smeg's sake! People 'round here think e-mail is something a Yorkshireman gets in the post ("Ee, mail!" No? Never mind).

Being an anthro and manga fan of some years now, my attention was quickly caught by RC! when I saw it on the shelves of Forbidden Planet in Bristol, so I pounced (caught Thieves & Kings that way too). I now have a firm order from a mail order buddy, so I wish you luck in keeping it going. By the way, have you ever read the "Unadulterated Cat" by Terry Pratchett? Now there is a man who, like yourself, knows how a cat behaves. Check it out.

P.S. The cat story, a bit long should you desire to print this letter so I've added it on at the end.

The cat in question was one Oedipuss, owned by friends of ours, the Eyerlish family (probably wrong spelling but never mind). The Eyerlishes had some very odd ideas about interior decorating, this included a very deep pile carpet in the lounge and hessian wallpaper, which also covered the ceiling. As a kitten, Oedipuss quickly discovered that he could struggle across the carpet, walk up the wall and stroll around, upside down, ten feet off the ground. A standard evening for the Eyerlish family would see the father reading the papers, the mother knitting, kids watching TV, and Oedipuss stalking moths on the ceiling.

Unfortunately, Oedipuss was in the habit of reacting when someone called his name, by retracting his claws. At which point he would plummet to the floor, bounce softly from the thick carpet, wash for a second, then walk up the wall again. This led to an unfortunate incident when an Aunt, who was rather nervous of cats, came to visit. Sitting on the sofa, cup of tea in hand, she nervously inquired "Is Oedipuss around?", whereupon a kitten dropped onto her head. The results of this I'll leave to your imagination.

Oedipuss could also never grasp the fact that, although HE was upside down, gravity still went the same way and hence was constantly surprised at what would happen when he tried to pounce on a moth or spider that dared to share the ceiling with him. The lounge light fittings were large dish shaped structures and once or twice a week the Eyerishes would have to rescue a wailing kitten that had fallen into one. Naturally, Oedipuss would never dare to jump to the floor, despite continuously falling to it by accident.

Alas, the aerial antics had to end someday, a day when Oedipuss was an adolescent cat. Halfway up the wall, there was a ripping noise and back down he came, trailing shreds of wallpaper. Redecoration in a more conventional fashion put a final end to the story.

The Eyerlishes had other cats, there was Ptolomy and Mackerel, the latter bearing kittens; Tonic and Super-tonic (who were black and shiny), Dominant and Sub-dominant (who were bossy) and Active (who was dead). Sort of says it all really.

We are the knights who say "Nee!"

Cheers! Andy Wiltshire, U.K

We've shown that letter to just about everyone we know and the imagery still never fails to crack us up! Four paws to Andy!

Hello Rikki and Tavi, oh and Catreece too! I just was stuck down with the worst case of the flu ,when a friend of mine gave me a copy of Reality Check # 2. They say that laughter is the best cure for whatever ales you. Well, it didn't really cure me (I was sick for another week, " sniff ") but I was rolling around on the floor laughing hysterically (maybe that's what made me sicker, hum...) :)

Anyways I just wanted to tell you that you have a great book, good writers, a wonderful artist and one darn cute little kitty.

Take it from an experienced living room speed bump—you're tops! ;)

Always chase your dreams (and butterflies). Thanks for sharing.

We're so sorry! Does your medical insurance cover comic book injuries? We'll try to put a Surgeon's General warning on the next issue. ;)

I just wanted to let you know how much I enjoy your Reality Check comic. I remember seeing it a while back in black and white, though I can't remember where...Duh. But when I saw it on the shelf in its new color format, I snatched up issues 1 & 2 right away! I sat down and laughed aloud while reading it because my little cat Tascha, seems a mirror image of Catreece. Either cats are a very predictable and an easily interpreted species or (I lean more toward this one--->) they really DO rule the world and have us all duped. May the antics of Reality Check, thrive and grow in this wonderfully capitalistic world of ours! You certainly have my support!

I'm sure you have heard about the cats that attack the mouse cursor on the screen (Tascha included), but my kitty Tascha likes to play with the CD rom drive door. She has learned that if she bats at the little button, out slides the cd tray, another bat and it slides back. Endless hours of indescribable fun for her, but a pain in the posterior when I'm (Goddess Forbid) trying to use it myself...

She also plays a variation of "fetch". She finds a small object, ball-o'-paper, rubber band, etc. and brings it to me and drops it in my hand. I am then expected to toss the object across the floor (wood finish of course) so that she may leap menacingly from my lap and skid, full force, into the small object which then surrenders to the laws of inertia and lets Tascha skid, full force, into the closest home furnishing. Her goal realized, she retrieves the object and promptly returns it to my hand. The funny part is, she just started doing this on her own, no prior training. Anyway, I imagine my cat is pretty dull compared with the rest of your readers, which is why I can't wait to find out how weird everyone else's cat is!!! ;-) Nee!

Maybe Tascha's trying to tell you something. Like...Maybe she's messing with the CD tray because she wants to play Rebel Assault or something. Hmmm...

Dear Rosearik and Tavisha,

Hello. I just wanted to comment on your book. I really like it. It has all the elements of a really cute manga and the story and art are great. I liked the How-to part in issue #3. You two seem like a really nice couple. I am also glad that you have found a home at Sirius. We can get your book on a regular basis. YAY! ^_^ What kind of music do you two like? I am guessing at Gothic but I should not assume. After reading the first Tavicat RC I went back and picked up a couple of your vampire books. I really really like Tavisha's art. It is beautiful. What were your influences for Catreece? How about a Nuku Nuku cross-over? ^_^ J/K (unless you can get it!:). One more question: where do you guys get Tuxedo Mask posters? ^_^ Well thank you for reading this and keep up the beautiful work!

Eagerly Awaiting #4,
Sincerely,
Patrick
Via the Internet

Alrighty, I'll answer the music question first. To give you a hint I'll tell you that this issue of RC! was created to the sounds of the Cocteau Twins, the Cranes, the Cure, Bauhaus, Tones on Tail, Switchblade Symphony, Human Drama, the Virgin Prunes, Dead Can Dance, This Mortal Coil...And then there was some real fun stuff like Cibo Mato, Bjork, Morrissy & the Smiths, Julie Cruise, Marc Almond, Portishead, Madness, the soundtracks to Macross Plus & Angel's Egg and a BUNCH of other stuff!

You actually found some of our vampire books??? Yeeesh...Those need a MAJOR reworking! Hopefully we'll get the chance someday.

As to Tavisha's influences for Catreece...Tavi says, "It stems all the way back to grade school. I didn't know how to draw people, and since I loved cats I just combined the two. When I was a kid, I use to try making cat characters out of popular TV personalities. at the time...such as 'Lavern & Shirley (did I just give away my age?!)."

And the Tuxedo Mask posters? Uh...Well, as far as we know they don't exist. Those Tux posters Tavi drew behind herself in the How-to segment were her dream posters.

Another cute picture by Kyle of Catskill, NY!

NYAKIKO!

Contact Mark Crilly at akiko19@mail.idt.net

Isn't this picture cute? We call it Nyakiko! There are only two comics that we really go out of our way to buy: Johnny the Homicidal Maniac by Jhonen Vasquez and Akiko by Mark Crilly. Mark's Akiko was one of the reasons we first approached RC! to Sirius Entertainment for publication. We figured any company cool enough to publish Akiko would be a great company to go with. We got to sit next to Mark at San Diego Con in '96 and he painted this cool picture of Catreece with Akiko hair when we weren't looking. Groovy, huh? Go buy his book! Now I'll have to beg Jhonen to draw a doodle of Catreece. Ooooo, that would be spooky!

I've enjoyed the first two issues of 'Reality Check'. The colors are gorgeous. Do I detect manga influence? 'Nya' is the standard Japanese cat sound. Maiko is cute—I won't mind seeing more of her.

How come most VRN users are content to use their mundane appearances? (Besides the obvious: Catreece would be lost in the crowd if everyone used morphing software.). Maybe use of a cyber VR alias has a destabilizing influence on the personality structure. Certainly there are enough kooks on the Net right now to support that notion...

The world of 2012 is no utopia, judging from the razor wire topping the fence around Collin's home, and around Erk's window.

Manifestival worlds offer interesting character insights. Catreece's world is spooky, with the house in decay and Collin's family dead. Collin's father and brother are obviously cases of arrested development. Collin's momscares me. I can easily imagine her running amuck with a cleaver.

I look forward to future issues.
John Prenis
Via the Internet

The VRN question is a good one. We've had more than a few people asking about it. I won't give it all away because we plan on having a complete answer in issue #6. For now, just know that the TVR software itself has problems creating anything beyond the user's true appearance. However, there are programs available that allow the user to change their hair, eyes, and skin color.

Also, it's important to note that that wasn't Catreece's spooky Manifestival world in issue #1. If you look at the monitor on page 13 of that issue, the interface reads, "Subject: Collin". So it was Collin's world, not Catreece's.

You know, I'm not even one to go into a comic book store, but today a new friend of mine and I went to one. I looked around, bought some stuff, and then before we went I looked around once more, and saw what looked to be like a cheesy comic book...But it was in color so I picked it up, looked thru it, and then eventually bought it (it was Reality Check!). All I can say is What A Cute Comic!!!!! I won't lie, I saw the picture of the cute kitty in the beginning, and it was so adorable I bought the comic! What a cute idea. I read the comic, it was lighthearted and cute all the way through! I don't know if that's what you wanted, but that's what I thought! I want a jpeg or a gif of Catreece:). if you have any, send some to me!:). I am quite a cat-lover:). I look forward to seeing another issue of reality check! :) hurry up and make more:)! I haven't seen a whole lot of comics in my day but from what I did see today, the illustrations in Reality Check are more pleasing than much that I viewed on the shelves:). the color looks great:). Well that's all, just wanted to tell you 'great job' :) I'm off.

We love getting letters like yours, Laustic! We really hope we can bring a lot of disgruntled comic buyers back into the shops. If you're looking for pictures of Reality Check! on the WWW, try checking our wed site at http://www.tcp.com/~bigboote/rchome.html

This next letter is the weirdest one we've ever received. Congratulations! You win the Indecipherable Award (a picture of Catreece saying, "Nee???")! We're still not sure what it means but it came with coupons for Nicorette, Rice Krispies, canned herring, and the Toy Story Video. They even cut out the label from a box of Cascade dishwasher detergent and stuffed it in a separate envelope. We don't know if the author is male or female but Tavisha says she hears William Shatner's voice in her head whenever she reads it.
